Editorial*HAIL AND FAREWELL

We ought to be glad it's over.

We ought to be glad that we no longer have to be awakened by early morning phone calls from irate students, and by phone calls even earlier in the morning (2 am or so) from distraught printers. We ought to be overjoyed that we no longer have to sweat and tear our hair every night as deadline time rolls around. We ought, we suppose, to be glad that we can now devote most of our time to serious studying.

We ought to be glad, but we're not.

It's been a lot of fun putting out The Daily four days a week throughout the year, despite the difficulties. We must be crazy, but we hate to stop doing it.

Our Aim

This year, as in the years before, The Daily has tried to keep McGill students informed of what goes on in this active campus. At the same time we've tried to keep you entertained, and to provoke your interest and discussion. Working with a new and smaller type of paper, it has often been difficult to fit in everything, but we've done our best. That there have been mistakes and deficiencies we know — perhaps better than do our critics.

Editorial Policy

Editorially we have been criticized for spending too much time on national and international (or even provincial) affairs. We think, though, that University students are interested in these things, and we have tried to strike a balance between discussion of these subjects and editorial treatment of purely student affairs. In all of these we have tried to be fair but not inert, consistent but not dogmatic. We hope we've succeeded.

But such success as The Daily has had this year is not particularly due to its Managing Board. Indeed, it is only when one is an editor that you realize how little you affect the quality of the paper, and how much it depends upon the effort and co-operation of others.

Staff contribution

The most important contributors to The Daily's success are, of course, its junior staff. If, as some members of the faculty have told us, The Daily's English is better this year, if its stories are better written and more interesting (which we hope they have been), the credit is due to the fifty-odd reporters, staff writers and desk editors who keep The Daily coming out.

Thank You

For the news that we get we are indebted to many people — both students and members of the University administration.

In particular, Principal James, Registrar Matthews, and Mrs. MacMurray — the Principal's secretary, — have been most co-operative in providing The Daily with information. The Athletics Department has also been of assistance at times.

Student officers — particularly Marv Gameroff, Roy Amaron and Trevor Bishop — have given us a great deal of help, and the Students' Society Office has made possible the administration of the paper as well as co-operating in giving us news.

Good Luck !

To all these people then, our thanks for their help in making this year's Daily a success. To next year's Managing Board — Morrie Shohet, Flora Ball, and Mike Laine — we wish the best of luck. It won't be an easy job for any of them, but we venture to predict that they will enjoy it, and that they will put out a good paper.

Goodbye

With this, then, we end regular publication for the year. Henceforth The Daily office will be quiet, filled only with nostalgic staffers looking wistfully at typewriters that at last are silent. For all of us, the year has passed much too quickly.

More Editorial . . .*ANOTHER TURN-OVER

The Daily is not the only campus activity which is being turned over to a new management, although one might think so considering the amount of space we give to it. The Students' Society of course has a new President taking office on the first of July, to whom we extend our sincere congratulations.

At the same time we'd like to comment on the career of Marv Gameroff, the present incumbent, which is fast coming to a close. We hope that his successor will be as successful as he has been.

Marv has a good many achievements to his credit in a year where he has tried not only to run a Students' Society but to get the pre-requisites to enter the Faculty of Medicine. Anyone who has tried to pass Organic Chemistry after four years without taking any Science at all will realize that his task was not an easy one.

Most important of Marv's achievement, we think, is the successful establishment of a second-hand bookstore which will commence operations next fall. This he has forwarded energetically, and the fact that it is to be established is a tribute to Marv's own efforts.

Marv has also supported the movement for a new Union to the utmost, and was largely responsible for the grant of $25,000 made by the S.E.C. at the end of last term. He has, indeed, displayed constructive leadership in the distribution of the extra funds with which the Students' Society was blessed this year, particularly in the setting up of a fund for grants to undergraduate societies.

In all, we think, it has been a good year. Much of the credit for this must go to Marvin Gameroff, President of the Students' Society.

J. M. F.

CONGRATULATIONS

We'd like to congratulate all those who won elections yesterday.

We hope that they realize the serious responsibilities that they have undertaken, and that they will do their best to raise student interest and student activity at McGill. We hope some of those elected to serve on the Council have a sense of humour, for Council meetings are often long and can become dull without three or four people to relieve the tedium with a little wit.

Most of all, we wish them success in their new jobs.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Our friends in the great big democracy to the south have done it again. Now Pravda and Izvestia, both important Russian newspapers of no particular value or harm to anyone are banned from the U.S. Mail. What is McCarthy still with us?

It strikes us that the big bad Egyptians are taking a somewhat bullying attitude towards poor little Israel. What earthly use can ten million Arabs have for a miserable few thousand acres that contain a comparatively few number of people? If the Arabs must fight why don't they pick on the Russians?

If the city administration is out to clean up vice why don't they get rid of those trashy breeders of vice and immorality such as Flush Mush and the biggest and loudest of them all Midnight?

Why don't our government people in charge of such things wake up to the facts and send over the Montreal Canadians or the Toronto Maple Leafs.

ORATORS TO VIE FOR PAPINEAU TROPHY

John Fraser, Claude-Armand Sheppard, and Bryce Weir will compete today in the Papineau Cup finals, which will be held at 1 pm in the Walter M. Stuart Room of the Union.

Dr. F. Cyril James, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of the University, will be the judge at the debate. His decision will award to the victor, the Talbot-Papineau Cup, which is symbolic of supremacy in public speaking at McGill.

Each of the contestants will be allowed to speak for fifteen minutes on the topic "Resolved that today's destiny is presented in political terms." "The speeches should provide a fine display of oratory and should prove to be quite interesting at the same time, judging from the experience of the participants," said Jerome Smythe, last year's winner, who will present the trophy to the victor.

Bryce Weir

A holder of a Gold-A debating award Bryce Weir, B.Sc. 2, has been an intercollegiate debater, and is Co-Chairman of Intercollegiate debating for this year. He was the winner of the Bovey Shield last year, and came first in the preliminaries for the Papineau Cup. In addition, he is a University scholar and has won the Canadian High School public speaking contest in 1952.

Claude-Armand Sheppard

On the staff of several city newspapers, Claude-Armand Sheppard, B.A. 4, was the originator of many of The Daily's most controversial articles, and is also an Intercollegiate debater. He won the

WHY I AM A COMMUNIST

by P . . . N . . .

"These things shall be a loftier race
Then 'ere the world has known, shall rise
With flames of freedom in their souls

folk hymn.

We are now at a decisive stage in our history, an era in which the universal struggle between progress and reaction is at its apex. It is an epoch in which new growing forces in society are taking the reins from the established, but dying forces. We Canadian youth now live at a critical point in our history. A point at which it remains for our rising generation, to decide whether we will be the creators of a new Canada, or will be content to be another "lost generation". It is on this basis that I have chosen to ally myself with the Labor Progressive Party, in the building of a new Canada and not with capitalism and its parties which only lead us to war and depression.

Unemployment

Capitalism has built up an economy in Canada, based mainly on war production. The weaknesses of this economy are being shown daily as a half million workers are already unemployed. When I graduate I don't want awaiting me the ultimatum Capitalism offers to the Canadian youth, of uniforms or unemployment. When NFCUS asked for scholarships for Canadian students, the government turned a "deaf ear", yet spends millions annually on COTC and other war preparation. Great sums are spent on war, but little on peace.

Failure of Capitalism

In the hands of the big Canadian financiers and industrialists lie perhaps the greatest natural resources in the world. Yet the monopolists in their quest for the maximum profit in the shortest time are selling our rich mineral deposits to American interests. Capitalism has failed to develop basic industries in Canada which would make our country one of the greatest industrial nations. Our gigantic iron ore deposits at Ungava are now owned by Cyrus S. Eaton of Cleveland, our asbestos, oil and countless other resources by Johnny Manville and other Americans. Canadian monopolists have lost faith in Canada and have put Canada in the position where she is now a mere raw material base, for American industry.

Even the freedom that has been won by the people under Capitalism is being curtailed and is in great danger of being lost. McCarthyism is spilling over into Canada, for even on this campus people are afraid to express opinions other than those of the government, or to discuss Socialism and Communism for fear of being discriminated against. The fact that capitalism is in its twilight stages and has become an obstacle to progress is shown clearly by the fact that it can only offer the youth of Canada a gun to earn their bread with and an "I the jury" to educate them. I cannot be at peace with capitalism when I see daily the great gains that the Canadian people have made, being lost in rising unemployment, threat of depression and curtailing of freedom. I cannot make peace with a class that can't offer the youth the chance to develop Canada's great potentialities but are in fact selling the sovereignty of their nation to a foreign power.

Rising Forces

I choose to ally myself instead with the new rising forces, the builders of a socialist Canada. If all the wealth and resources of Canada were in the hands of all the people instead of a few, an era of undreamed of prosperity would be Canada's. The common ownership of the means of production and all Canada's wealth will enable the Canadian people to determine consciously the great future that is to be theirs. Socialism and Communism will place before the youth of Canada the challenge of building Canada's great rich northland which now remains untouched. Today's government has refused to build a steel industry at Sept Iles, Quebec. This project would be carried through under a people's government and would provide 55,000 skilled jobs for Canadians youth. Graduating engineers and science students would have the opportunity to be part of this great construction.

Socialism, will enable the youth of Canada to participate in the construction of a new society in Canada. A society in which harnessing nature for man's welfare will be their keynote, a society in which employment will be guaranteed to every individual by the state. The use of the wealth of this country in the interests of the people will enable socialist society to provide the opportunity to every individual for a free education. Advanced technology, free education and economic help from the government will raise every worker to the level of technician, engineer and scientist. The people's ownership of our great wealth will be used in educating man and destroying the egotistic selfishness that is bred into him in a Capitalist society and will raise man to a completely new level in his historic evolution to a stage when the communist motto of "from each according to his ability and too each according to his need" will become a reality.

This is the new life offered to me and to all Canadians, a great goal which can replace the growing cynicism of today's youth with a hope and vision that will lead them to a better life. I am confident that the people and especially the youth of Canada will accept the great challenge that socialism gives, the challenge of building a life for Canadians which will enable man to be master of nature and his fate, and to proceed in history without fears and confident in his future.

The Question

by Joseph R. Nuss

At eight o'clock Gary was awakened by the gentle touch of his mother as she laid her hands on his shoulder. He must, he told himself, chase the sandman away lest he fall asleep again. His mother aware of the child's reluctance to rise, and sensing his imminent lapse into slumber, drew back the covers. The cool air of the room slapped him into wakefulness, and he sat up as his mother dressed him. Automatic motions of limbs slipping out of pyjamas into underwear. The same trousers of an almost indistinguishable colour, patched and mended times beyond recall, were drawn up his legs to the hips and adjusted, as the suspenders met his shoulders with a loud snap. His mother looked at the sock, noting the almost transparent heels, and slipped them on his feet with the hope that they would survive the day . . . finally the scuffed shoes with the holes forming on the oft repaired soles.

Gary went to the bathroom where his mother washed his hands and face in the cold water which ran through the faucet marked H. The familiar morning routine was climaxed with chocolate milk and buttered bread.

Hewas now ready for school. He gathered his books, donned his jacket and descended the ill-lit stairway, pausing at the bottom to watch a spider in the process of constructing a web.

The sun blinded him for a moment as he stepped out on the street. The garbage cans lined the sidewalk waiting for the disposal trucks. Gary thought how good it was that the hot summer had passed. No more hordes of green-bellied flies swarming about the reeking refuse.

The morning at school went very quickly with arithmetic, spelling, games at recess, an exercise in writing, and finally teacher read from that nice book with all the pictures. She had often read to them about the kings and queens, fairies and goblins. This morning the story was very sad — but only in the beginning. It was all about a very poor family who didn't even have a piece of bread to eat nor

FREUD IN THE CLEAR

It is only a few years ago that the song parody, "I'm the sweet-heart of Sigm . . . und Freud", sung by an enchanted young thing, was a hit of the annual Toronto revue "Spring Thaw". However, fashions change in these matters, and now Kinsey seems to be the rage. (Remember the cartoon - matronly type looking up thoughtfully from a book, "Is there a Mrs. Kinsey?") At the risk of being out of date, the recent publication, in English, of the complete works of Sigmund Freud deserves notice. Perhaps the lack of fuss now over the ideas of Freud is the best indication that they have become a part of the fabric of our modern life.

Freud the Thinker

It is rather disconcerting to see the manner in which Freud's thinking fits into accepted scientific dogma today. Perhaps equally startling is Freud's prediction of this years ago. The whole edifice of the psychoanalytical theory, he wrote in 1917, "is in reality but a super-structure which will have to be set on its organic foundations at some time or other". Before taking his medical degree in Vienna in 1881, he worked in a physiology laboratory. It was only after a period in orthodox neurological practice, that Freud gradually launched upon his psychological theories. His ideas then, were not arrived at in direct opposition to the accepted neurological conceptions of his day, but were rather an attempt to broaden their then narrow limits.

Deep Significance

Through association with a fellow named Breuer (well-known to veterinary students as part of the Hering-Breuer reflex), Freud realized that the symptoms of certain forms of hysteria had deep emotional significance for the patient and could only be understood in the light of his psychological history. It seems that "psychoanalysis" is a double-barreled word. When it is applied to the method of searching interview, ferreting out the general course of emotional development from early infancy, the word describes a standard psycho-therapeutic procedure of today. But another matter is the use of the word "psychoanalysis" to describe the body of Freud's theories - which underwent constant modification in Freud's lifetime, and is still evolving. Freud's critics would seem to err in attacking his work as a set, well-integrated explanatory system linked by propositions of a deductive character. If you accept the idea that psychoanalysis is rather a set of provisional, fragmentary hypotheses designed to coordinate the clinical findings brought to light by the psychoanalytical method, then it seems that Freud's ideas are reasonableness itself.

The best-known concepts of Freudian theory are two. That of repression he developed from the idea of the intentional forgetting of distressing events. Then it appeared that the forgetting might take place without the subject being aware of its occurrence; and that the material forgotten might never have been clearly represented in consciousness. To explain the subtle nuances of this, Freud had to develop his metaphysical jargon which proved so distressing to those cold-blooded logicians who never forget anything. But Freud's main interest and activities gradually turned to the conscious.

Overboard

Freud is often accused of having gone overboard for his second concept, that of the sexual factor, not only in mental illness, but also the small things of everyday life. It is said that he applied sexual interpretations to almost everything his patients said or did. But the fact is that he did not publish this theory until he had been in psychoanalytical practice for 15 years. Whether Freud be right or wrong, it seems that his patients produced the facts long before Freud thought up his astonishing explanation.

All neuroses used to be ascribed to a traumatic origin. Freud took his first step in assuming that the traumatic events were really sexual. His interviews with patients showed that trauma was not an essential factor, but that there existed fantasies of a sexual nature that could only be explained by assuming that psychosexual activities had their beginning in early childhood. This doctrine of infantile sexuality gave birth to ideas of partial instincts and libidinal stages, the concept of fixation and regression, the Oedipus complex — and through this to the psychoanalytical theory of neurosis. It seems that the facts support Freud's pansexualism.

Prolific Writer

The amount of work Freud accomplished in his lifetime - he died in 1939 - is staggering. First he was a practising physician - he lectured - and then he found the time and the inclination to turn out the massive tomes in which the body of his work is contained. But his fancy turned to other things as well as these titles of his books testify -

"Beyond The Pleasure Principle",

"Wit and its Relation to the Unconscious", "Totem and Tabu", and "Moses and Monotheism".

Therapeutically, the Freudian system is limited in its successes, and is being replaced by more rapid and, on the whole, more effective treatment for mental illnesses. But now Freud's principles are considered to have less relevance to neurosis and its treatment than to the general problems of human personality and its development in society. Perhaps the reason why Freud's ideas are so important and likely to be with us always, in one form or another, is that Freud's challenge was not human ignorance, but human distress, to be countered by skilled investigation and care.

THE QUESTION . . .

any clothes to wear. The mother was sick and the father couldn't work and they were oh so poor. Everyone in the class felt very sorry for them. But fairies saw how unhappy they were, and because they were good people, food was sent down, the mother was made well, and money was placed behind the kitchen door. They lived happily ever after. Gary and his classmates liked the story very much.

Most of the kids went home for lunch, but Gary stayed and had his in school. Afterwards, he went out to the yard and joined in the games which his classmates were playing. The heel of his sock didn't hold out . . . an ever enlarging hole revealed itself at each step the boy took. At the end of the hour Gary was a dishevelled figure with flushed face, messed hair, ill-clothed. Jim, a playmate whom Gary liked but did not know too well, sidled up alongside him, and they talked about games, radio serials, teacher and generally kept within the usual range of subjects.

They had stopped talking for awhile, then Jim looked at his classmate with eyes that denied having seen him before, and appraising the person before him asked in his matter of fact tone, "Gary, are you poor?"

Without hesitation the other replied "No".

"Are you rich?"

"No. I'm not rich but I'm not poor . . . I'm-m-m in between."

When class was dismissed for the day, Gary hurried home. He didn't want to miss the afternoon adventure programs. They were so exciting, he hoped the "good-guys" would finally capture the "bad-guys" and give them what they deserved.

The bare light hung from the ceiling, casting grotesque shadows around the room, magnifying the simple furniture in its projection. The chair with the broken leg used to be comfortable, but he couldn't sit in it now. He squirmed on the once white kitchen stool. His appetite was roused as the heavy greasy smell of the supper meal permeated through the small house, . . . but dad should be home soon and then he would eat.

His father arrived, removed his dusty boots with a good-natured grunt, took off his sweat soaked shirt, washed, and sat down to the table. He looked at his son.

"Gary, I brought something for you."

"What is it?"

"Ah, that's a surprise boy, now you be good and we'll see what it is after supper."

Gary tried to imagine what it could be, but couldn't even hazard a guess. His father and mother were talking about things he couldn't understand very well. For a moment there was a pause as all ate.

Gary raised his head, levelled his eyes at his father and asked "Dad are we poor?"

The man looked at his wife through eyes filled with a knowing helplessness. She answered his gaze with an expression of long suffering resignation. Gary waited for an answer.

His father rose from his chair. "Here is your surprise son. Do you like it?"

Gary fingered the gift with a hesitancy conveying pleasure and surprise. . . . A book of fairy tales, — just like teacher's. He had already sullied one of the pictures with his greasy fingers.

CAGERS CLOSE CURRENT CAMPAIGN

Joe Anderson's senior cagers wind up the 1954-55 schedule this weekend when they travel to Hamilton and Toronto. The games will have no marked effect on the final league standings as McGill and McMaster can finish no better than fifth and sixth, respectively and Toronto has a strong hold on third place.

The surprise of the year has been the showing of the Queen's Golden Gaels. At the start of the season they were rated no better than fourth or fifth in the league but they are now in first place with a record of seven wins and three defeats. Johnny Metras' Western Mustangs are in second place with a six and one record and need win only one of their three remaining games to finish in a tie with the Gaels. However the Mustangs, are favoured to sweep their three remaining games and occupy the top roost alone.

Only one member of this year's Redmen squad will be graduating. Captain Mel Mikalachki will play his last intercollegiate basketball games this weekend to wind up a great career in college ranks. Mel has been playing with a wrenched back since the game at Queen's last week but has managed to maintain a scoring average of 17 points a game.

With only one player leaving his ranks, coach Anderson will have a nucleus of experienced players to build around next year. The centre of this nucleus is bucket man Leon DuPlessis. Dupe joined the squad this year as an unheralded player from Dover Plains in the neighbouring territory of New York and soon established his reputation as one of the finest performers in the league. His main asset (besides being 6 ft. 4 in. tall), is a beautiful hook with either hand. He is no slouch at shooting jump shots, sets, and drive-in lay-ups, either. This large variety of shots has made it very tough for the other teams in the league to guard Dupe effectively and they usually resorted to putting two and even three men on his tail. His 18 point per game average rates third in the league behind Fedor of Queen's and Joseph of Assumption who have been averaging 20.

It has been a tough year for Timmy Lake. He tore some ligaments in his leg early in the season after several outstanding games. Lake does have one consolation however, he is still eligible to defend his beer drinking championship of the team next week.

"Phat" Lou Gordon, Baron Byng's gift to McGill basketball, Ozzie Zommers, and Finney Hefernan are the regular forwards who are expected to return to next year's squad. Ex Hi-Aces star Johnny Thompson who usually plays a full game for the Redmen on defence is also expected to display his slick ball-handling for the Redmen again next year.

There are several players on the squad this year who have a good chance to break into the first string lineup. The most outstanding of these is lanky Tom Leung who gave a good performance when he was pressed into action against Toronto on the weekend. George Rosenberg is another who has been improving steadily along with Cec Jones, the Kentucky Colonel, and Jerry Kushner.

If some of the stars of this year's Intermediate team return to McGill, the theme song of the Redmen may well be changed from the old familiar refrain of "Don't Cry Joe".

SPORT SEASON SAYS "SO LONG"

By Bernie S. ("Scoop") Haber

As the end of the sporting calendar draws near, the time has come to take a good look at the sporting achievements of the many athletic teams. True, the senior football situation leaves a lot to be desired and heat-emitting cheerleaderettes are still a mirage but let those eternal pessimists take a good look at the actual picture. When it comes to the number of intercollegiate championships, the Old Alma Mater has her fair share, seven to be exact. Only the vaunted Blues from U of T can boast as many.

Boxing

In the championships held at Varsity the red pugilists finally pulled off the title they had been chasing so hard for six years. Not since the days of the great Jimmy Miller have the prospects looked so good. Veteran coach Bert Light goes on record as saying that this is the best group of boys he has coached in ten years. Even the boys who didn't win any individual honours this year are promising prospects and it looks as if McGill has the materials for championship teams of the future.

Water Polo

The Ashtonians have won the Herschorn trophy, emblematic of intercollegiate water polo supremacy against Toronto, but what really impressed in a big way was the improvement in some of the newcomers to the team. Addleson and Weinstein are really fast in the water, and with a little more practice will be valuable members of next years squad. One of the brightest things on the water polo horizon has been the performance of Bernie Toporovski. That boy plays offence and defence equally well and his sensational playing ability might do a lot next year to make up for Jackie Novicks absence who is graduating. If there are any medals going round, Jackie should be in for his share, for he's been a consistently dependable performer for the past four seasons. On John Chabrols showing, it looks as if the goal keeping slot is in good hands for a good few seasons to come.

Swimming

In the swimming championships the Red aquamen only managed to place second but it was a very narrow thing. In fact McGill did a lot better than expected and showed that Hedberg's absence is not irreplaceable. In fact it was the loss of the relay that cost the local splashers the title, and in that event Cook's absence was felt. However in the acquisition of Jerry Anderson the Alma Mater acquired a diver de luxe, who looks as if he has got most of the Canadian diving competition tightly sewn up. To add to all this Anderson is no slouch in the water either. Next year Coach Greg Titus should have a real championship team, as all the boys will be swimming again.

Rugger

The rugger team has been winning championships fairly consistently and this year was no exception to the rule. It was regretful that student apathy made it necessary for the Athletic Department to even consider dropping rugger from the athletic curriculum. So we were glad to hear that rugger is to be retained as a sport at McGill; for it is becoming increasingly popular and we haven't got any championship teams to spare.

Squash

The Hall Martin trophy, emblematic of intercollegiate squash supremacy, has been retained by the local birdmen for the ninth year running. In fact that valuable piece of silverware feels so much at home around here, that it has almost decided to adopt the Currie gym as its permanent home. This proves the old adage that the strength of any sport is proportional to the interest taken in it. And squash is becoming increasingly popular, as evidenced by the number of people taking it as their required sport. So squash prospects look very bright indeed for future years, as the team will not be short of manpower, a factor which has been the curse of many of the other teams.

And More

To make up for the senior football team, the intermediates made

LIBRARY INAUGURATES NEW HI-FI SYSTEM

The hi-fidelity system that has been installed in the library for the purpose of giving students the opportunity to hear poetry and plays that have been recorded, will be demonstrated on Thursday evening to a select audience. Owing to the size of the room, it has been reluctantly decided to limit the entrance to officials of the English department and the library.

The idea of this room was introduced by Mr. Pennington, McGill's chief librarian, who said yesterday that the new room would be named The Lady Roddick Poetry Room, after the benefactress who supplied the funds to put the idea into practice. The room will hold approximately twenty people, and has six sets of earphones for the use of small audiences. At the present moment the room is situated in the old part of the library, but providing the trial run is successful the machine will be moved into the new portion and will be located in the old stacks. It is uncertain whether the move will be made in the near future or during the summer vacation.

When questioned about the records themselves, Mr. Pennington stated that there were about 120 in the room at present, and that 100 more were on order. This comprises the total amount of records of this type that are in existence, but more will be added as they appear on the market. Some of the records are of the actual poets reading their own work. Among the plays are two of T. S. Eliot's — The Cocktail Party, and Murder in the Cathedral.

The room will be open only to students under supervision.

a clean sweep of their league, the Ottawa-St. Lawrence conference. To round up the picture we copped the golf and skiing championships. Just for good measure you can add the bridge title, the latter trophy should gladden the hearts of all enthusiastic pool room athletes.

As a special concession to the president and members of the M.D.H.W.A. and affiliated journals, such as Pravda, the senior pucksters look like being a very good bet for getting the second slot in the intercollegiate hockey league. That's a tremendous improvement over last year's position, in the cellar.

So though we didn't pull off any of the big three championships this year, McGill's athletes deserve a sound cheer for what they did achieve. Prospects look fairly good for next year, all the way round, and let those eternal groaners stop complaining about what we didn't win and instead take a good, long look at what we did win.

When a strike closed up all the banks in Eire a few years ago, pub owners and shopkeepers, stuck with their receipts, were happy to cash cheques. Loan payments were stopped and the banks no longer hounded overdrawn customers. But the fun was soon over. The government had to suspend interest payments made through the Bank of Ireland. Rubber cheques began bouncing about and exporters, unable to arrange letters of credit, had to close up shop. Bankers came into new esteem. The Irish learnt that these gentlemen, who make money their business, are very useful fellows indeed.
